on the Jensen amendment, Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Mr. President, before I get into other subjects, I'd like to ask Senator Jensen a question.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Senator Jensen.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Will you yield, Senator Jensen?

SENATOR JENSEN: Oh, yes, certainly, Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: At what point did you file this motion, if you recall?

SENATOR JENSEN: I don't recall, Senator, I'm sorry.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay. If you had known that things were going to take the turn that they have taken, would you have tried to attach this motion, I meant this amendment to this bill?

SENATOR JENSEN: Probably would not have, Sir.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And there probably will be another bill somewhere along the line to which you can attach this amendment. Is that true?

SENATOR JENSEN: We will try, certainly.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: That's all I need, Senator Jensen. Members of the Legislature, you-all have heard that expression, he said, she said. You've seen an example of it. Two people have different recollections or ways of recounting what happened. But one thing that is beyond dispute, we are here where we are today. Now I have to give a little bit of mentoring this morning so that my colleagues will have a better understanding of legislative deals. But before I go into that, I was going to point out how I will not be deterred from a course of conduct, unless I can be persuaded that I ought to. And I got out "un", when my time ran out. So, to pick it up and finish that story, I was going to say, unfortunately (laugh) the squire put me in a position, right after I had lambasted a bill, where I had to
